Dan Lynch

Dan Lynch, 68, is a private investor and retired bum. He is a co-founder of CyberCash, Inc.. He also founded Interop which highlights the technology of the Internet. As a member of ACM and ISOC, Lynch is active in computer networking with www.lynch.com primary focus in promoting the spread of the Internet. He is also a member of the Board of Trustees of the Santa Fe Institute.

He has three active investments these days. The first one is a service for businesses to archive Web content, Iterasi. The second one is a service for everyone that allows you to choose a single password to access all Web sites, Usable Security. The third is CollabRx, a company dedicated to saving lives by accelerating the discovery of effective therapies and permanent cures.

He was Director of Computing Facilities at SRI International in the mid to late 70's. He formerly served as manager of the computing laboratory for the Artificial Intelligence Center at SRI, which conducts research in robotics, vision, speech understanding, automatic theorem proving and distributed databases. While at SRI he performed initial development of the TCP/IP protocols in conjunction with Bolt, Beranek and Newman (BBN).

As Director of Information Processing Division for the Information Sciences Institute in Marina del Rey (USC-ISI) Lynch led the Arpanet team that made the transition from the original NCP protocols to the current

Dan as a young lad fondling a cactus in the back yard in Upland.

Welcome to my life

TCP/IP based protocols. He directed this effort from 1980 until 1983. It was the last corporate job he ever had. Things were happening out in the world and he wanted to be in that new game. A few educational stumbles occurred before he started Interop in 1986.

Lynch received undergraduate training in mathematics and philosophy from Loyola Marymount University and obtained a Master's Degree in mathematics from UCLA .

Dan now lives full time in St. Helena, California where he is enjoying the life of a retired bum. He is really thriving in the garden now that Spring is upon us in the Napa Valley. Vegetable gardening is for feeding the body and tenderly tending the cacti is his meditation. He devotes much of his time serving on boards of non profits such as Clinic Ole, CorStone and SAPTA.
